

CAMP DIRECTOR

Camp Director Rich Alercio was named the first head coach of Castleton football in February, 2008 and piloted the Spartans through a successful inaugural campaign this past fall.

A 1987 graduate of Ursinus College, Alercio spent the previous 15 seasons as the offensive coordinator at The College of New Jersey. During his tenure, the Lions won five championships and made six post-season appearances. His offense set dozens of individual and team records in rushing, passing, and scoring.

Prior to The College of New Jersey, Alercio spent three seasons in the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference -- two years at West Chester University and one year at East Stroudsburg University. While at each school, Alercio helped both win PSAC Championships and berths in the NCAA Division II playoffs.

In his first season as Castleton's lead man, Alercio's Spartans finished 3-6, including a 42-28 win over Anna Maria in the team's inaugural game. Eight different players earned ECFC All-Conference honors and four were lauded with All-Academic honors during the season.
